

nano
spot

A nanometer is one
-billionth of a meter.

Have you ever
noticed that each bubble has a little rainbow on it?

The walls of bubbles are a few hundred nanometers thick and are constantly changing as they float through the air.
Since light reflects different colors with the varying thickness, you see a rainbow.

<http://bit.ly/nanobubbles>

Graphics created by the Science Center of Iowa